A REAL HOUSEWIFE TURNS JEWELRY DESIGNER

AUG

Before she was the most controversial of "The Real Housewives of New York," Bravo's Kelly Killoren Bensimon was a New York model, an editor at Elle Magazine, and the author of several photo books on style. Her ex-husband, Gilles Bensimon, was the head photographer and creative director of Elle for many years. But it was "Real Housewives" that launched her to national television fame, notoriety - or whatever you want to call it. Now Kelly is turning designer and business woman. She's launched a jewelry line called "Kelly" at Intermix stores across the country. Produced by famed jewelry manufacturer Mouawad, based here in Los Angeles, the affordable pieces are perfect summer accessories. Intermix will be carrying the s Navaho & Snake inspired rings and necklaces, and you can head to Intermix on Robertson in LA, or go to www.intermixonline.com. Will Kelly be fighting with Bethany again next season? Will Kelly be wearing the jewelry on the new season? Do girls like jewelry? Do people buy stuff from people they see on tv? You know what the answers are.
